

JAMES GRIFFIN THE VICTIM

BODY FOUND IN RIVER AT VER-NON JUNE 29 POSITIVELY IDENTIFIED.

He Was Last Seen June 25—Probably Accidental Drowning, but Some Strange and Unaccountable Circumstances.

The body found in the Connecticut river in Vernon Saturday, June 29, has been identified as that of James J.
Griffin, about 50, for a score of years or more an employe in concrete sidewalks and other street work in Brattleboro. He has been known familiarly as "Boss" Griffin. He lived alone in a little house on Vernon street.

The description of the body published Friday, showing that the victim of the drowning had a thumb amputated at the first joint and that the upper jaw contained only two back teeth, led to a suspicion among some of Grif-fin's neighbors on Vernon street that he might be the man, as he had not been seen around his house in several days, and these peculiar marks fitted the description of him. Notification was sent to his sister, Mrs. Nora Toubill of Springfield, Mass., showing that the body was not her brother's. She had never been to see her, and Mrs. Toubill, thoroughly alarmed by the reports received, came here Saturday.

The body was found Saturday, June 29, about 2 o'clock in the morning, near Cooper's Point in Vernon by William Love and Everett Stockwell, two young men who were in swimming near E. T. Stockwell's. In diving into 10 or 12 feet of water Love touched the body or the snag against which it rested, causing the body to come to the surface. The Hindale authorities were notified, but they did not deem an inquest necessary, and the body was turned over to Undertaker Wetherbee and it was buried Sunday in the old cemetery in Hinsdale. The drowned man had worn winter clothing, heavy underwear, striped shirt, socks and Congress shoes considerably worn. The pockets contained no money, but a meerschaum pipe, handkerchief, door key and fine cut tobacco were found.

An investigation was started Sunday when Griffin's guardian, S. W.
Edgett, the sister, Mrs. Toubill, and Mrs. Nora Duggan, John Baker and John Moynihan went to Hinsdale.
They found that the body could not be exhumed without a permit from the state health authorities in Concord, and they returned without gaining much additional information.

On Wednesday the body was taken up, the party going from Brattleboro to view it, including Dr. Conland, Dr.
Aldrich, Mrs. Toubill, Mrs. Duggan, Mrs. Thomas Rouse, John Baker, John Moynihan, and Robert H. Baker. The body was not so badly decomposed as might be expected, but so badly bloated and blackened as to be unrecognizable. The undertaker had reported finding a slight wound on the forehead, but this was only an abra-sion, which might have been made by striking against a stone, log or other substance in the water. There was nothing about the body to indicate the manner of death. A measurement showed the height to be exactly that of Griffin's, 5 feet 5 1/2 inches. The amputated thumb was the jaw with two teeth were the most striking marks in the identification. The key in the pocket, which had been secured Sunday, had already been used in opening Griffin's house, fitting the lock perfectly. The shirt on the body was a Metropolitan make, was exactly like one found in Griffin's house. He had bought such shirts of Young & Knowlton. The trousers matched a coat which had been brought from the house on Vernon street. Griffin always wore congress shoes, and it was known that he had on his heavy underclothing when last seen. Safety pins were used in fastening the suspenders, and the clothes in Griffin's house had similar fastenings. One strap on a shoe was broken, and such a strap was found at the house. Robert H. Baker, who had cut Griffin's hair, said that he could recognize the head by the scars, but the bloated condition and the matted hair made identification by these marks impossible.

All the evidence, both with reference to the body and the clothing, tended to show that the body was that of Griffin's. The sister and the other relatives were satisfied that the identification had been established beyond reasonable doubt. The body was turned over to the relatives and brought to Brattleboro for burial.

Griffin's death was probably caused by accidental drowning, but there are several strange circumstances connected with the case that will probably always remain a mystery. Griffin was last seen Tuesday, June 25. One of his cronies admits being with him in the forenoon and another says that he left Griffin at the railroad crossing that night, saying good night as Griffin started down the track toward his home. Both of the cronies claim that Griffin had not been drinking. Griffin was addicted to drink, and often got in a condition where he found it impossible to walk. The natural supposition would be that he fell into the river while intoxicated. But he was not seen outside of Brattleboro so far as known and it is unaccountable that the body should be found seven miles below Brattleboro near in 10 or 12 feet of water. If he had fallen into the river at the toll bridge or near Brattleboro the body would naturally have gone to the bottom within a short distance. If it rose after decomposition set in it would not sink again.

The conditions tend to show that the body sank in the water near where it was found. But it is difficult to explain how Griffin could have got to Vernon without leaving a trace of his course there. One theory is that he may have gotten into the river, seized a log, and floated a long distance hanging to the log before he became exhausted and sank. The log driver who cleaned up the log drive passed through here Wednesday, and on Tuesday night the river was filled with logs. Griffin could not swim. There is a possibility of suicide, but there is no particular reason for advancing it, and this theory would not explain the finding of the body in Vernon under the circumstances described.

Some people were suspicious of foul play at first, but there is nothing to show that Griffin met a violent death, and so far as known, there would be no object for murder. Griffin was an inoffensive man, even when in his cups, and would not naturally get into a row. He apparently had little or no money. Several years ago he inherited about $1000, left by his mother.

Griffin had the use of this money, and it went freely for a time. There was only about $200 left four years ago, when an application for a guardian was made and S. W. Edgett was appointed. Since then Mr. Edgett had looked out for his affairs. He allowed Griffin to get what he wanted at the stores on orders, but gave him almost no cash. Griffin had worked recently about three weeks on the highway near F. Z. Dickinson's farm. On June 17th, a son of D. T. Perry, the road commissioner, paid the men, and not knowing that Griffin had a guardian, gave him $10.50. Two weeks previous Griffin had received $8 or $9 in this way. Griffin would naturally spend a good part of the $10.50, especially if he bought freely of liquor, as might be expected. The finding of the meerschaum pipe was regarded at first as startling evidence, as his acquaintances said that he did not smoke a pipe, although he occasionally bought cigars when under the influence of liquor. Two or three pipes were found in his house, also tobacco, and it is believed that he was in the habit of smoking when at home.

A Palatable Feast for 2 Cents—Try It.

Did you know that the Deerfield Valley and Hoosac country traversed by the Boston & Maine Railroad is one of the most beautiful regions in the country? As a scenic paradise it has no equal. On every side the scenery changes with panoramic swiftness to the infinite delight of the beholder. Then, too, there is no little historic interest attached to the territory journeyed through.

This interior country is a delightful vacation ground, and on every hand there is to be found unlimited accommodations for the tourist. Another feature in rural out-door life. Another pleasurable feature is its accessibility from not only the whole of New England, but from New York and the West as well.

The Boston & Maine has just issued a book bearing the name "Hoosac Country and Deerfield Valley" which is a delightfully written story of the country, and after reading it you will want to visit the region. Send a two-cent stamp to General Passenger Department, Boston & Maine System, Boston, for Book No. 15; you will enjoy reading it.

LOCAL OVERFLOW.

Mrs. J. Lewis Morse, Jr., of Philadelphia is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. L. Hawley.

E. C. Carpenter of Guilford has sold his house to Fred Coombs of that village. Mr. Coombs is proprietor of the grist mill which stands near the house.

The women of Sedgwick Relief corps will hold memorial exercises at the Cathedral Monday evening at 6.30. All members are requested to carry flowers.

Two cases of diphtheria appeared this week in the family of Fred Paterson of South Main street, and the house is under quarantine. Antitoxin was administered and the patients were more comfortable yesterday.

Winford Randall, 22, of West Chesterfield died about 6.30 o'clock last night of sunstroke caused by chasing a horse in a pasture on Wednesday.

He leaves a mother, wife and two children. The funeral will be held tomorrow and the burial will be in West Chesterfield.

The Fair Last Evening.

The rain of yesterday afternoon and evening did not prevent a good attendance at the annual fair of the ladies of the Unitarian society. The excellent supper maintained the longtime reputation of these women in this respect. Festival hall has never been made more attractive on such an occasion than in its simple decorations of nature's greens and flowers.
Equally pretty in their arrangement were the tables for the sale of fancy and useful articles, flowers, confectionery, etc. Last year's novel feature in the introduction of Marie Grosse, with burlesque and tambourine, and her burlesque music for the dancing was repeated. A large company of young folk participated in this annual function, to the evident enjoyment of everybody concerned.

THE YACHT RACES OFF NEWPORT

Constitution Won in Light Airs, but Was Beaten by Columbia Yesterday.

The new Herreshoff ninety-footer, Constitution, won her first race, defeating the Columbia by 11m. 6s. actual time, and 9m. 49s. corrected time.
The Boston boat, Independence, was also in the race, but she was so badly beaten—almost an hour at the weather turn—that she did not finish.

The race was not by any means an ideal one. During the entire contest the wind was light and very streaky. The time made by the winner was only 21m. 54s. inside the time limit of the match, which was six hours for 30 miles. This was on Saturday.

Monday the Constitution beat the Independence by 29m. and 25s. over a 30-mile triangular course, and the independence, the much-touted Boston boat, was beaten 1 hour 19 minutes and 14 seconds. These are actual times without time allowance. It was reported after the race that the independence was leaking badly and that her plates had been strained badly.
The Columbia won yesterday's race in fine shape, with the Constitution second and to the amazement of all yachtmen the Independence a remarkably good third. The Boston boat sailed an exciting race with the Constitution at the outer mark, only to be beaten by her a little over two minutes on the run to the finish before the wind. The breeze today, however, was much stronger than on previous days, which apparently accounted for the fine showing of the Lawson yacht, and again the independence sailed the 15 miles to windward without her jib topsail and seemed to hold higher, at the same time footing just as fast. The result leaves the question of the three yachts a delicately uncertain, after all, while the Constitution has yet to prove her unquestioned superiority to the other two yachts in anything except very light airs. The Columbia, on corrected time beat the Constitution 4 minutes and 37 seconds and the Independence 37 seconds and 53 seconds. The Constitution beat the Independence over the course two minutes and 15 seconds, corrected time.

Tunneling Project at New York.

The Long Island railroad's tunneling projects have now been definitely mapped out and duly recorded with the proper public authorities. The proposed extension will start in Long Island City and begin the descent to the tunnel under the East river at or near the Hunter's Point terminal. On the Manhattan side of the river the road will run under the Thirty-fourth street ferry-house and then follow Thirty-third street to Herald or Greeley square, which is to be, as President William H. Baldwin of the Long Island company expresses it, the "Hub of the metropolis of the western hemisphere." Here the principal stations of the Manhattan extension of the road will be located underground, for the road will be from 70 to 80 feet below the surface. The tunnel will cross Manhattan island. But at Thirty-third street and Fourth avenue, where the underground rapid transit line, now being constructed, will be crossed, the Long Island road's tunnel will be some 100 feet below the surface, passing under the rapid-transit tunnel. At this point there will then be four roads in operation, one above the other—the Thirty-fourth street surface line, the present Park-avenue-tunnel line, the rapid transit line, and 75 feet from the surface, and the Long Island line, in the solid rock, 25 feet lower. From the main stations at the square where Sixth avenue crosses Broadway the Long Island will build out into Seventh avenue and then north under the avenue to Forty-second street, where connection will be made with the underground rapid transit line; and, ultimately, as planned, out upon the North river bridge, to connect directly with the lines of the Pennsylvania system, of which the Long Island road is now a part. This great work is to be undertaken as soon as the necessary permits are obtained, and will be finished, it is expected, in about two years. It will bring Long Island within quick reach of Manhattan, and lead no doubt to its great development as a residential section; possibly also to the location of a transatlantic terminal at Mon-tauk Point, in accordance with Mr.
Coringham's idea of linking England with five days of New York.

Edward Parker Deacon, 57, who died in the McLean asylum in Waverly, Mass., Friday night, gained notoriety from two continents by shooting Abelle, a Frenchman, who was found in Mrs. Deacon's house in the Cannes, France. Deacon was tried and convicted of manslaughter in France, but President Carnot pardoned him. Deacon belonged to a wealthy Boston family, but had spent much time abroad. His wife was the daughter of Admiral Charles H. Bal-win. After the shooting Deacon declared a divorce. Deacon was found violently insane four years ago.
Soon after he killed Abelle he spent much time in Greenfield, Mass., where one of his daughters attended the Prospect Hill school. He has also at the Brooks House here for two or three periods. He impressed people here as being very reserved, but with a temperament always at high tension. Besides his divorced wife he leaves three daughters and a son.

The controversy between the United States and Turkey over the claims for indemnity made by the government on account of the destruction of American property in Armenia, which has several times threatened to cause trouble between the two countries, has been settled by the payment of $50,000 to John G. A. Leishman, the United States minister at Constantinople.

Pierre Lorillard, the millionaire tobacco dealer, died in New York Sunday. He inherited a fortune of $1,000,000 from his father, the first Pierre Lorillard, who founded the family fortune. He bought the interests of his brothers in the business left by the father, and developed them. He had been a patron of the turf nearly 30 years, owning some of the finest racing horses in this country and in Europe. He leaves a fortune estimated at high as $25,000,000.

At the time of the auction sale of the personal effects of Mrs. Laura Haskins Mrs. George P. Miller bought a curiously wrought iron knocker which it is believed was the property of Hon. Samuel Elliot, the prominent old-time Brattleboro citizen, from whom Elliot street was named.
Rev. Clifford H. Smith of Pittsford, a grandson of Mr. Elliot, has recently bought the knocker of Mrs. Miller's estate. He has a valued family heirloom, and as a work of art. Mr. Smith's mother was one of the seven children of Mr. Elliot by his second wife, Belinda Hayes, daughter of Rutherford Hayes.

BRATTLEBORO MARKET REPORT.

Corn Higher and a Short Crop Predicted This Year—Big Advance in Oils —Sword Fish in the Market.

Feed continues on the upward grade.
During the past week there has been a jump of five cents in corn and oats and 10 cents in meal, bringing the price of the latter up to $1.25, and the limit has not yet been reached. The promise now seems to be for a corn crop of some 10 per cent less than the one of last year, which was not equal to the demand. A leading Chicago house says that corn is in great demand for home feeding in many places in the West at prices considerably higher even than those in that city.
For the new crop eastern Kansas and a large part of Missouri have ceased to hope for enough to supply home needs, and many of the farmers do not expect any crop at all and are parting with their stock. They have not had a good rain for three months.
Southern potatoes, are on sale in Brattleboro for 40 cents a peck, which is five cents higher than last week. Local dealers began buying spring chickens this week, paying 22 cents a pound, dressed. Boiled and raw oils have jumped 15 cents a gallon. Cherries and blueberries are in the local market at 15 cents a quart.
Watermelons sell for three cents a pound and are of excellent quality.
Lobsters have advanced to 25 cents.
The first shipment of sword fish this season is going at 25 cents a pound.

At WILCOX'S NEW YORK BAR-GAIN STORE.

Have just received a large invoice of fruit jars. We have in connection with the Mason and Lightning jars. Smaller square jars with lightning can cover which makes it the best fruit jar on the market. Remember that our prices are always at the lowest. This is our best weather. Come in and see us. They are the best made for the price paid.
